

HIGHER EDUCATION TRAINING - EMPLOYER FEEDBACK

The feedback received from employers is an essential aspect of evaluating the effectiveness of any academic program. It helps to determine whether graduates have acquired the necessary skills and knowledge to perform well in their chosen field. The feedback from employers can be particularly important for university graduates, as it provides a measure of the graduates' preparedness to enter the workforce and their ability to meet the expectations of potential employers. At SIMATS deemed university, the positive feedback from more than 200 companies during a placement fair is a strong indicator of the quality of education provided by the institution. The feedback indicates that the graduates from the university are well-equipped to meet the needs of the industry and have the necessary skills to perform well in their respective roles.

The positive feedback from employers also reflects the efforts made by the university to provide a comprehensive and industry-relevant curriculum, practical training, and exposure to real-world scenarios. It also demonstrates the commitment of the university to continuously improve and adapt to the changing needs of the industry and the job market. In conclusion, the feedback received from employers is a crucial metric for evaluating the effectiveness of any academic program, particularly for university graduates.
